OFFICIAL SHIP GREETER TURNS TO NEW STUNT

August 2, 1935---At the Pacific Coast Dock yesterday afternoon, Patsy Ann, Official Ship Greeter, displayed unsuspected qualities of determination and moral turpitude.

Patsy Ann entered the freight office on the dock, purloined a ball of wrapping cord and retired to the rear end of a transfer truck to admire her plunder.

Longshoremen, draymen, tourists from the Aleutian and miscellaneous spectators entered a conspiracy to deprive her of her treasure, but Patsy Ann foiled all of their best efforts.

Cigarette smoke was blown in her face, her tail was pinched, leverage was applied to her jaws, but Patsy Ann remained adamant.

Finally she was taken to one of the posts supporting the roof of the freight shed and a protruding end of the wrapping cord was secured to the pillar under the mistaken impression that sooner or later Patsy Ann would be forced to leave her loot in order to greet an incoming ship. Patsy Ann merely broke the cord and returned to the transfer truck. At the latest report she still had her ball of cord.---Daily Alaska Empire
